Description: THIS RESOURCE IS NO LONGER IN SERVICE, documented on September 06, 2013. It was established to develop, implement and support the information infrastructure necessary to achieve large-scale data sharing among the test bed participants (function, morphometry and mouse birn). The BIRN-CC consists of a unique and well-established partnership between computer scientists, neuroscientists and engineers. This partnership addresses a large array of technical, policy, and architectural issues to fundamentally enable a new suite of information technology supported database and analysis tools that allow scientists to analyze and interpret significantly larger sets of data than is possible in the traditional single-institution study paradigm.
